Before Edward I's time, an acre
was the amount of land a yoke
of oxen could plow in a day.

Edward pegged an acre at 40 rods
by 4 rods (each rod = $16\frac{1}{2}$ ft long)

The inch first represented the width of a man's thumb but was standardized in classic Rome as $\frac{1}{12}$ of a foot (A Roman foot)

In 1395 Edward I of England defined that the ~~inch~~ yard of three 12-inch feet and decreed that the inch should be equal to three grains of dried barley laid end to end (still used by shoemakers)

Henry VIII (16th Century) used his thumb to redefine the yard. According to tradition the yard was distance from tip of his nose to tip of his thumb at the end of his outstretched arm
